

WINE AND MOONLIGHT

Could have been the wine or was it the moonlight
Or was I just blind and now I see
You make me feel so high under the moonlight
And I like the way you're looking at me

I've lost count of how many times
That a love that seemed to be in color turned to black and white
Feeling like you've nothing left to offer once you've paid the price
Is this the universe's second chance
Or one last dance?

We were like two drops of rain
We shared a wild ride that ended in a world of pain
I tried to salvage just my pride forget your face forget your name
You were the habit that I meant to quit
My heart could not forget

I'm a wave and you're the tide, you're pulling
And I'll come crashing to the shore.
What I feel for you tonight I'm reeling I can't veil my eyes
I'm still yours
